it wasn't "someone else" who worked 60, 70, 80, 90 and sometimes even 100 hours a week (try that for three months sometime) to build Main Street Media.

It also wasn't "someone else" who went to the bank to beg for enough money for the down payment to purchase the first newspaper.

It wasn't "someone else" who has paid a small fortune to the government in income taxes over the years.

It wasn't "someone else" who did everything from sweeping the floors to running errands to kissing people's behinds to keep the business afloat.

Our case is not all that different from any of the other millions of small business owners who had a dream and sacrificed much in the way of a personal life as they worked themselves long and hard in an effort to make the business successful and to provide food for the family.

Although it will never happen, we'd kind of like to see all business owners just stop, close their doors for a few days, put a sign on the door and say, "Don't blame me, I didn't build it." Don't you just wonder what government would do?

A common comment in Washington is that a gaffe is when a politician ment. The same is true for the workers in yellow vests. Their paychecks and benefits are coming from private businesses, many of them the very small businesses you want to hit with huge tax increases, and ultimately destroy because Dear Ruler is in the process of creating a government that has now become destructive of the very ends it was designed to support.

When our leaders become so enamored with themselves, and of the government we have hired to manage, they become a grave danger to those unalienable rights set forth in the Declaration of Independence, a document we wish Dear Ruler would read and follow, especially the part about rights to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, which says we may "pursue" happiness. It does not guarantee it.

What a stark difference in philosophy? Let's compare Ronald Reagan's America to that of Dear Ruler. Mr. Reagan said: "There are no constraints on the human mind, no walls around the human spirit, no barriers to our progress except those we ourselves erect." Dear Ruler said, "If you are successful, you didn't get there on your own." — Jack Krier

Some of the things that we have done:

Leota Arment helped the family celebrate Bill Pixler's birthday with cake and ice cream.

Aaron and Hilary Peterson had baby Allie dedicated at the Church of the Nazarene one Sunday. We were a part of the congregation along with many of the Peterson and Lambert families.

Janelle and Adrian Schulte were home for Allie's dedication and we got to visit with them and meet baby Georgia who is one day older than Allie. (actually less than a day older, Curtis counted the hours!)

Don and I attended a bridal shower for Dana Hojda one Sunday.

Like all of you, people in the neighborhood have been trying to deal with the heat by watering grass, flowers and trees. I have been setting a ring birds. The birds hot, they sit around their beaks open. they are panting like a dog. Many of the enjoy the water; the smaller ones get down on the grass but will fly through water spray.

Leona Conawa special surprise the Sunday afternoon her cousin, Kent Henrichs, and his stopped in to visit. Henrichs were on way home to Dallas a trip to the Great Northwest.

The big Peters this week was the Letter to Editor:

My name is Leona Groenendyk and I am running as a Republican candidate for Magistrate J.

I married Lir Tanis in 1980 and in 1982 we moved home where she was born and raised. I started farming on my parent's land in the S.E. corner of Smith County. I realize the last name of Groenendyk is a common name in Smith County. My parents are Lawrence and Ileen (Koop) Tanis. If the last of Tanis doesn't have some recognition of the last name of Koop, I've told Lir that I should have been the one to change my last name to Tanis instead of changing her last name, that way people would have known who I was related to. Linda and I have 3 children and 1 daughter. We've been foster parents since 2000 and have found this very rewarding experience.
